

think much of them either. But be that as it may, I know that sounds funny, but read The Bretheren and find out how they made their decisions and you'll realize that they are nothing but a bunch of political appointees. Anyway, this handout, under current law says, if you don't submit to the chemical test, automatically you lose your license for six months. Then it says, if you are convicted or if you plead guilty under this bill, you don't lose your license. Then it says, LB 377, if you're not convicted, you lose it for a year if you refuse to take the chemical test. Now that sounds like a pretty fair form of justice to me for a bunch of radicals. Lose your license for a year if you're not guilty? Or am I misreading this? I'm reading it. LB 377, if a person is not convicted, one year license suspension. And then it says, 377, with the amendment you're going to lose it for a year unless you plead guilty. And then it says right after that, 377, again with amendment, if there is plea of guilty or no contest, no revocation. How come just above that it says two different things. First...I'm looking at that little square, Senators. LB 377 with amendment, unless plea of guilty, one year. Right below it, LB 377 with the amendment, if plea of guilty or no contest, no revocation. How can you have it both ways? We...look at that. Does it make sense to you? It doesn't. I'm going to plead guilty and we're going to pass LB 377 with the amendment, 2535, and I'm going to lose my license for one year. And in the bottom box it says if I plead guilty or no contest, still under 377, I get no revocation. How can you intelligently vote on this if you look at this handout? Nobody has explained this. It doesn't make sense. I just don't understand it. I asked Senator Wesely about it, about the first sheet which I gave up on and Wesely says, it's confusing, but this, this isn't confusing, it is totally contradictory unless somebody wants to stand up and say, Senator Higgins, you dummy, this is what it is saying. But I can't read it any differently. Got the current law, got 377. If I'll plead guilty I'll get no revocation, twice on this sheet.

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR HIGGINS: Under 377, with or without the amendment, I get no revocation if I plead guilty. But whether I'm guilty or not, I'm going to get one year if I don't take the test. And again, I'll get one year unless I enter a plea of guilty. If this is the explanation of the bill, God help us, God help us. I mean, a Philadelphia lawyer couldn't understand this. I'm
